Copenhagen, Aug. 7.—After opening to civilized settlement the vast northeastern coast of Greenland, and mapping out large tracts of unexplored land in the interior, under the auspices of Denmark, Mylin Erichsen, perhaps the most daring of modern arctic explorers, has met death in the far north.

According to information just received in a telegram to the committee of the Denmark-Greenland expedition Erichsen and two of his companions that sailed with him from Copenhagen June 24, 1906, to the unexplored regions of the northern coast of Greenland, perished in a snow storm. The three men were on an expedition over the ice when disaster overtook them.

Otherwise the exploring party has been successful. Large tracts of known land have been mapped out, and the entire northeastern coast of Greenland had been charted.

Erichsen and his companions were on an ice floe when they were overtaken by the storm. The floe drifted out to sea. The provisions of the explorers soon became exhausted. They drifted for some days, growing weaker and weaker.

When the floe was finally driven back to land the three men did not have sufficient strength to make the effort necessary to return to the station. They must have perished on the shore.

The Eskimo who brought in the news of the disaster arrived at the station in a dying condition and succumbed immediately after making his report.

Erichsen had devoted nearly a decade to the exploration of Greenland. His first expedition returned from that country in November, 1904, after two years and a half in the north.

The expedition that sailed from Copenhagen two years ago was supported financially by the Danish government, and his plans had been approved by many societies of scientists, including the American Geographical society.

On a former occasion Mr. Erichsen distinguished himself as the chief of a party which traversed the route across Melville bay to the Cape York Eskimo settlement on the west coast of Greenland.

Mr. Erichsen planned on this last trip—and this was the most adventurous portion of his undertaking—to cross the eternal ice cap of Greenland at its broadest part, by means of snowshoes, dog sledges and an automobile. He purposed to set out about March, 1908, accompanied by one of his staff and two Greenlanders belonging to the crew.

Other members of the expedition with fully loaded sledges were to go with him the first third of the journey. After leaving his companions Erichsen and the three men he planned to take with him were to proceed to the unknown ice dome of the interior, which rises at its highest to 10,000 feet above sea level.

This region is completely devoid of vegetable and animal life, and here it is believed can be found one of the cold poles of the Northern hemisphere.

It is doubtful if man could live there in the coldest season. Under these circumstances the leader chose the months of March, April and May for his venture. He hoped to compass this venturesome journey in about two and a half months, coming out on the west coast.

It was probably on this trip that the explorer met his death. The worst about most young people is that they don't begin to think seriously about marriage until after it has happened.

Responsibility for Discharge of Colored Troops.

Washington, Aug. 7.—For the purpose of relieving former Secretary of War Taft from criticisms on account of the discharge of the colored battalions of the 25th infantry following the Brownsville affair, Lieut. Gen. Corbin today gave out the hitherto unpublished dispatch from President Roosevelt showing that the order of discharge came from the President and was peremptory. General Corbin in an interview says under the circumstances Taft couldn't do anything but obey the orders.

Chicago, Aug. 7.—The arms and right foot of Tulla Spishen, the 13 year old Syrian boy, who was murdered, and whose body was then cut into bits, were found early today in a clay hole a half mile from the spot where his head was found yesterday. Simultaneously with the finding of the last remnant of the dismembered body, Stephen Kantrenets, a boarder at the Shishen home, was brought here from Racine, Wis., and put into custody. With him the police are holding Hassia Hemmer, alias Yusuf Hassamamen, a Turk.

New York, Aug. 7.—As soon as suitable grounds can be provided in this country, Henri Farman will attempt, in a flight open to the public, and under the auspices of the Aero club of America, to better the world's aeroplane record of 12 miles in 20 minutes and 20 seconds, made by him several months ago in his flying machine at Issy, France. Mr. Farman last night outlined briefly his plans for the flight.

"When I flew at Issy," he said, "it was under the most unfavorable conditions. I had no oil tank and was forced to put an extra amount into my motor. It was thus hampered and then, too, it was not sparking well. Bleriot had already flown eight minutes. They were awaiting me and it was almost sundown. I flew very weakly, my machine barely clearing the ground a half dozen times. I came to earth only when my petrol gave out.

"Now I have a bigger petrol tank installed that will supply my motor for a two hours' flight. My radiator will work for 100 hours before caking inside and my engine will not heat. So you see that I am not over confident when I say I can fly for at least one hour."

EMPEROR SENDS REGRETS.

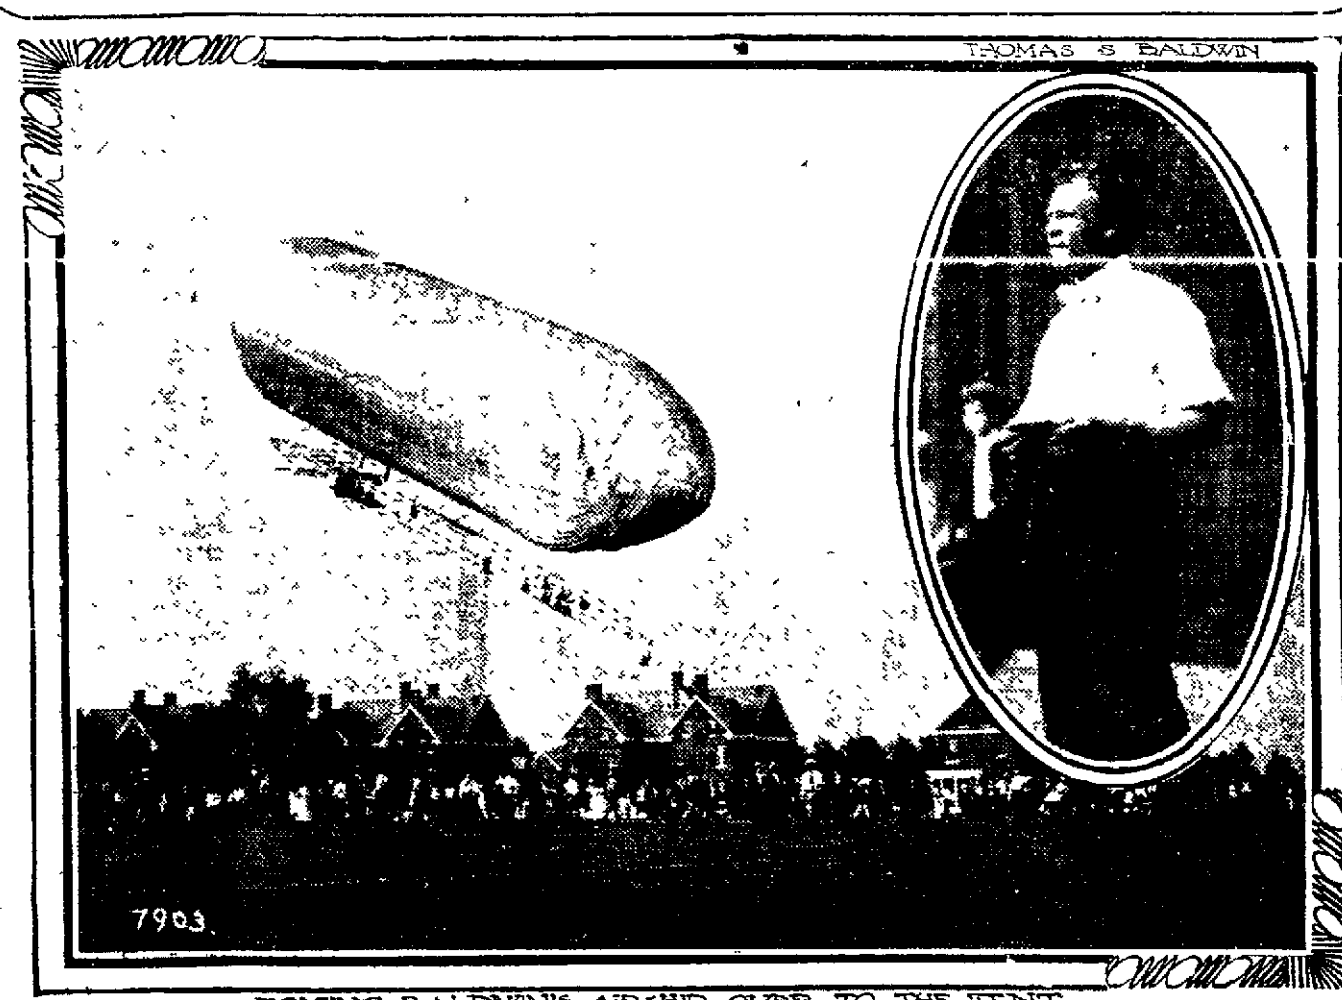

Friedrichshafen, Aug. 7.—The King of Wurtemberg called on Count Zeppelin yesterday and conveyed to the aeronaut the personal regret of Emperor William over the destruction of the count's airship at Echterdingen. The emperor telegraphed:

"I have heard with the deepest regret of the destruction of your balloon by a storm, and I wish you to know of my cordial sympathy in your misfortune. All the more since I and all Germany thought we had every reason to believe we could congratulate you on the glorious realization of your splendid, epoch-making achievement. Nevertheless, what you have accomplished must be recognized as of the highest order, and this must be a comfort to you in this catastrophe."

Count Zeppelin later replied to Emperor William as follows:

"Your majesty's telegram has turned my grief to joy. I will gladly devote myself to your wishes and those of the German people and continue the construction of airships."

RAIN PREVENTS FLIGHT.

Lemans, France, Aug. 7.—A heavy rain began here and for this reason Wilbur Wright, the American aeroplaneist, decided to postpone the beginning of the trial flights of his airship. Mr. Wright, who is still suffering from the burning of his left arm, was rather glad of the postponement, as it will permit his elbow to get better and stronger. Free use of his left arm is very necessary in manipulating his aeroplane. Mr. Wright said to the Associated Press: "My arm still pains me, but the aeroplane is ready. I may fly any time the fancy seizes me."

SUBSCRIPTION FOR ZEPPELIN.

Berlin, Aug. 7.—A national committee has been formed at Stuttgart, under the presidency of Prince Von Hohenlohe-Langenbourg, to raise a public subscription for Count Zeppelin. Already more than 375,000 has been raised, and the promises received reach double this amount. The subscription list of the Berlin Bourse totals over 25,000. From every city in the empire comes the announcement of the opening of subscriptions for Count Zeppelin.

TO COMMEMORATE DISASTER.

Demarest, Aug. 7.—The government of Hesse has decided to erect a commemorative stone at the scene of the disaster to Count Zeppelin's airship.

Upper Sandusky, O., Aug. 7.—Frank McCormick, a hotel bus driver, was shot and instantly killed by James Goodlove, proprietor of a rural hotel at the Pennsylvania railway station here last night. A mob attempted to lynch Goodlove.

The men had long quarreled over business rivalry. Last night Goodlove is said to have called McCormick a vile name. McCormick struck Goodlove, who drew a revolver and fired. Goodlove gave himself up to the authorities and was taken to the county jail, where a mob formed, bent upon doing him violence.

The sheriff immediately swore in several extra deputies, who protected Goodlove.

She declares that her husband was a great deal below her station in life when she married him and that she hoped to tame him and make a man out of him.

The couple have been married about a year, and Mrs. Battles declares in her petition that she realizes he is too confirmed in his ways for reformation.

Auckland, N. Z., Aug. 7.—The Culgoa, attached to the Atlantic battleship fleet as a supply ship arrived here last evening from Honolulu. The Culgoa just before arrival received the following wireless message from the American battleships:

"Yesterday and today there was a fresh breeze to moderate gale with rough seas. This morning the weather was the heaviest encountered since leaving Hampton Roads. The ships are pitching heavily. Spars were knocked down. We will increase our speed to 11 knots and expect to reach Auckland on schedule time. There will be no fleet evolutions today on account of the weather. Vessels keep their formation and distance easily."

On arrival in harbor here, the fleet will anchor in two lines abreast of the city. There will be no public ceremonies on Sunday, the day of arrival.

JAPANESE STRIKE BREAKERS.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 7.—Japanese are being brought here to aid the Canadian Pacific railroad and to break the mechanics' strike. Three hundred of the brown men who have been tried in the shops of the Pacific coast, have already arrived and are being distributed to such points as must be supplied with operatives to keep the road in operation. It is now feared that the strike may extend so as to interfere with the operation of the roads in the western states.

New York, Aug. 7.—Following the identification of the clothing worn by the woman whose body was burned by fire and acid on Greenpoint dump, John Kikowski of Stapleton, Staten Island, has been arrested and today is in collapse in his cell. Despite a rigorous examination he denies any knowledge of the woman though letters spotted with blood have been found in his room and he has admitted taking the victim of the crime to Greenpoint on several occasions. Frank Fofskovski, a Staten Island gardener, identified the victim of the murder as his wife from whom he had separated.

Hong Kong, Aug. 7.—Representations were made to the officials here today that unless more heroic steps are taken to relieve the suffering arising from the typhoon which recently swept parts of Southern China, that thousands of people will die of starvation. The work that the government has done so far has proved wholly inadequate to relieve the distress.

VORYS COMES TO FRONT

As Probable Candidate to Succeed Senator
Foraker

Candidates in Both State Tickets
Have Arrived—Reunion Opens With Legislative Ball.

Cedar Point, Aug. 7.—Gathering here for the annual legislative reunion, present members of the General Assembly and prospective candidates talked of little but the progress and probable effect of the contest over saloon regulation.

The declaration of the Personal Liberty league and allied organizations for Judson Harmon for governor and for the repeal of the Rose county option law, coupled with the demand of the Anti-Saloon league for the election of Governor Harris, is having the effect of breaking party lines, breaking them almost completely in many counties. State leaders of both parties are finding it next to impossible to line up the legislative situation with reference to the selection of a United States senator.

Representatives of the Democratic state organization here on the ground are denying any coalition with the liquor interests. There is the intimation, but no authoritative announcement, that Judge Harmon will make clear his position, as far as the temperance agitator is concerned, as well as on other questions, in his formal speech at the opening of the Democratic state campaign.

While the general discussion of the United States senatorship hinges largely upon the prospects of capturing control of the next assembly, and in consequence drifts into consideration of the liquor fight, yet Arthur I. Vorys looms large as a senatorial possibility.

If Williams H. Taft is elected president the opinion prevails among the gathered solons that Vorys will be the big factor in the situation. With no candidate endorsed, there is growing belief, provided the Republicans capture the next assembly that the name of Vorys will go before the party caucus on the senatorship backed by the leaders in the state organization.

The candidacy of Congressman Burton is not being talked of except in the comment that he should wait until 1910 and then go after the seat occupied by Senator Dick. That Myron T. Herrick, whose friends say he will not be a candidate in 1909, has his eyes on Dick's seat is generally understood.

Granville W. Mooney of Ashtabula county, Joseph D. Chamberlain, Montgomery county, and Judge Noah J. Dener of Scioto county, all have ambitions to be the next Republican speaker of the house of representatives. They are here maturing their own booms. Mooney and Dener are certain of re-election. Chamberlain has a hard fight ahead because of the ill feeling in Montgomery county over the rule of Charles Bieser, its Republican boss.

The majority of the candidates on both state tickets did not get here until today. Early arrivals were Secretary of State Thompson, C. C. Green, Republican candidate for treasurer, and David T. Elev, Democratic candidate for dairy and food commissioner. The regular reunion program began last night with the legislative ball.

WILL SPEAK AT OPENING.

Cedar Point, Aug. 7.—Gov. Hughes of New York, and Gov. Harris of Ohio, will be two of the speakers to open the Republican campaign Sept. 5, at Youngstown. Chairman Williams announced today that this much of the program had been decided. Asked as to the attitude of the committee toward Senator Foraker's presence he replied that nothing had been settled. The sub-committee of the Republican state executive committee meets late this afternoon to settle all details of the opening.

Some Names In the News

Charles M. Daniels and His Swimming at the Olympic Games—Senator Warner of Missouri.

Bishop Potter's kind heart—His successor, the Right Rev. David H. Greer.

CHARLES M. DANIELS, the champion swimmer, won honors for America at the Olympic games in England, breaking the Olympic record in the 100 meter swim, his astonishing performance on several previous occasions. At the Olympic games in St. Louis in 1904 he made a world's record, swimming 230 yards in 2 minutes 44 1/5 seconds. He gave the foreign swimmers another surprise at the games in Athens in 1906, when he swam away from them and took the 100 yards race. Daniels is a member of the New York Athletic club and in winning the world's amateur championship has done much to popularize swimming as a sport in this country and to give it a leading place in the programmes of organizations devoted to athletics. His style is much praised by experts, and his ability as a swimmer is all the more remarkable because he started to swim only about six years ago. His father, a member of the Knickerbocker club, brought him to its pool and entrusted him to the care of Professor Alex Meffert, asking the coach to teach his boy how to swim. Daniels says that the first time he got in the pool he swallowed enough water to sink a warship. But after that he determined to learn the watery art and spent day after day practicing. After a careful study of the various strokes used for speed swimming Daniels put into practice certain ideas of his own that he had gained while practicing. He learned the English racing stroke and compared its results with several other strokes that are used in various parts of the world. Finally he came to the conclusion that the crawl and the trudgeon strokes were the best ones to use in racing.

The death of Bishop Henry Codman Potter of New York has called forth

many anecdotes indicating the broad sympathies and kindly heart of the eminent scholar and divine. On the very day before he was taken sick he had gone out to carry some flowers to a poor sick woman living near his summer home at Cooperstown, N. Y. The bishop was noted for his humor, and during the most dangerous stage of his illness he was able to crack a joke now and then. A young newspaper woman who had arrived in New York from the west was once sent to interview Bishop Potter as her first assignment. She made an appointment by telephone, but on account of other engagements was unable to be on time. However, when she arrived she found the bishop ready to receive her. He cordially invited her to be seated and inquired as to the exact nature of the desired information. Then in his characteristic manner he dictated his statement. After the reporter had finished writing she courteously offered to read what she had written. The bishop insisted that he knew it was correct and allowed it to go without hearing it. As the reporter arose to take leave she said graciously: "I thank you, Bishop Potter, and appreciate how much it means for a busy person like yourself to give your time to reporters." Putting her on the shoulder in a fatherly manner, he replied: "My dear little woman, we are both earning our living." The breadth of Bishop Potter's views was indicated in the following recent utterance in reply to a question as to the present religious outlook: "I am persuaded," he said, "that the movement of religious thought today in all lands is a movement progressive toward a larger light and higher ideals. A great many communions are unloading formularies or dogmatic statements which are characteristic efforts to substitute an infallible book for an infallible man, the modern scholar having realized that no revelation can really have a divine author unless it is progressively illuminative. This is the point to be made clear by such a discussion. Personally I am in no doubt as to the future triumphs of the Christian religion nor as to its supreme adaptation to the wants of man, but that it will have to go through great modifications in many doctrinal statements and dogmatic positions is undoubtedly true."

The Right Rev. David H. Greer, D. D., LL. D., bishop coadjutor, who will become the successor of Bishop Potter as head of the New York diocese, was chosen to his present post in 1903, and his consecration to his high office was the occasion of an impressive assemblage. It was just twenty years previous that Bishop Potter had been consecrated, and he, too, was at first coadjutor bishop, being assistant to his uncle, the late Right Rev. Horatio Potter. Bishop Greer and Bishop Potter were in full sympathy in their ideas of church administration and the functions of Christianity in its organization.

BISHOP DAVID H. GREER.

Bishop Greer is a liberal in his interpretation and application of creeds and is progressive and original in evolving new ways of making the church more helpful to all classes in the community, as was strikingly shown while he was rector of St. Bartholomew's parish. The work done by this noted church embraces a wide field of activities, and it was brought to its present level of usefulness largely during the rectorate of Bishop Greer, which extended from the year 1888 to that of his consecration as bishop. He was born in Wheeling, W. Va., in 1844 and studied at Washington college, Pennsylvania, and at the Episcopal seminary at Gambier, O. He is finely preserved and is often seen in the environs of New York on horseback, being very fond of open air exercise, which has done so much to keep him vigorous. He looks more like a business man than a clergyman and is an ecclesiastic whose experience and surroundings have given him an exceptionally broad development.

Senator William Warner of Missouri, chairman of the committee charged with the duty of nominating Judge William H. Taft of his nomination for president, was elected to the United States senate to succeed Francis Marion Cockrell and was the first Republican to be sent to the senate from Missouri for over a quarter of a century. His choice was the outcome of a prolonged and noted contest. Senator Warner was born in Wisconsin in 1839. He was left an orphan at the age of six years and at ten began to make his own living by working in a store. In five years he had saved enough to give himself two years in college, all the higher education he has enjoyed. Then he taught school and studied law. Just after he was admitted to the bar the civil war broke out, and he joined the Thirty-third Wisconsin volunteer infantry, rising to major. After the war, in 1865, he settled in Kansas City, Mo., then a frontier village. He has practiced law there ever since, having been recognized as one of the leaders of the bar.

He has been active in politics throughout his career and has been city and circuit attorney, mayor, United States district attorney, member of congress and an unsuccessful nominee of his party for governor. In 1888 he was commander in chief of the G. A. R., and President Roosevelt offered him the post of pension commissioner, but he refused it.

At the surrender of Vicksburg, July 4, 1863, Major Warner was captain of a company in a Wisconsin regiment. He stood between the lines of the opposing forces and read the Declaration of Independence as the soldiers marched. He was cheered by both Federals and Confederates.

BUDD'S LEAP FOR LIFE.

Former California Governor's Narrow Escape From a Rattlesnake.

James H. Budd, the former governor of California who recently died at his home in Stockton, Cal., told some years ago the following story of an escape from the bite of a rattlesnake which he once had. "I was up in Calaveras county fishing along the Stanislaus. I had been told of an almost inaccessible hole pool up the river at the base of the perpendicular cliffs and fairly alive with trout. I found the place and also found there was only one way to get a hook into the pool. I had to climb on my hands and knees up a steep path to a sort of shelf on the cliff. On the edge of the shelf was a steep drop of forty feet down to the pool. Just as I dragged myself upon the top of the ledge the whirr of a rattlesnake startled me. Naturally I jumped to my feet, exhausted as I was, but dropped my fishing rod. The coiled rattler was within two feet of me and preparing to strike.

"Either I had to get down on my hands and knees again or jump forty feet into the pool. As I saw the diamond head of the snake draw back to strike I decided and jumped. Just as I sprang the rattler struck. I had a pair of moccasins on my feet, and the fangs of the snake fastened in the one nearest him. As I went down I remember seeing the snake flying over the other side of the pool. Its fangs had caught, and I had earned it with me. Just what happened in the second or two after I struck the water in my dive of forty feet I don't know. Fortunately the pool was fairly deep. As I dragged myself upon the rocks at its edge I realized with a thankfulness I never knew before that I was not only alive, but had escaped the snake and broken bones. I was badly bruised, but not seriously hurt. What became of the snake I don't know."

"MERRY WIDOW" HOUSE.

Washington Man Builds For Himself Novel Summer Home.

"My neighbors call it the 'Merry Widow' house."

This is the statement which James L. Parsons, a builder of Washington, made in regard to the summer home he recently completed for himself a short distance beyond Chevy Chase lake. "And the name is very appropriate," said Mr. Parsons, "for the broad eaves have the appearance of a big straw hat set on top of the house. But there is a good purpose served by those broad eaves, for they help to keep the house cool and comfortable, and that is the principal object to be sought in a summer home."

"Everything about the house was planned with the idea of summer comfort. The windows are wide, and there are plenty of them. The doors also are wide, and they are arranged that, no matter in what direction the wind may be blowing, the doors may be opened to let the breeze blow through the rest of the house."

"On the first floor everything is level, including the porch floor, which is on a plane with that of the rooms, and there are not even doorsteps over which one may trip. Another novel idea which has been introduced into the house is that of having all the doors high, extending almost to the ceiling. This keeps the hot air which rises in a room from 'bagging' near the ceiling and warming the air of the entire room."

The house contains a wide entrance hall, living room, dining room, kitchen and pantry on the first floor and five rooms and bath on the second floor, with servant's room and large attic room on the third floor. The foundation is of concrete and the upper part of frame, with the exception of the attic floor exterior, which is of corrugated iron.

STEAM AS DISINFECTANT.

Dr. Rickard Suggests New Method to Keep Library Books Clean.

A saving of thousands of dollars for the Boston Public library may result from Dr. B. R. Rickard's discovery that dry steam of a very high temperature is a better disinfectant of books than the formaldehyde now used. Steam is cheaper, more penetrating and less destructive than formaldehyde, he believes.

John Ritchie, Jr., health commissioner of Boston, who attended the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Association of Health Boards at Gallipoli island, where Dr. Rickard read his paper on "Disinfection of Library Books," was much impressed by the idea. The Boston Public library may experiment with the new treatment.

Kites to Guard a Chicken Yard.

The science of aviation has been adopted by John Wolfe, a poultryman, who has a farm at the top of Hook mountain, near Montclair, N. J., to protect his young chickens from the predations of hawks. Wolfe keeps several large box kites flying above his berries, and the hawks take no chances of an encounter with such uncanny looking birds. Wolfe got the kite idea from his young nephew, who found the locality an ideal one for flying his newfangled box kites, and Wolfe noticed that the hawks took to the woods while the kites were in the air.

NEW NOISELESS GUN.

Powerful Steel Weapon to Fire 50,000 Shots a Minute.

LOOKS LIKE COFFEE GRINDER

Does Not Need a Barrel—Impossible to Jam It—No Gunpowder, Compressed Air or Electricity Used—Has Range of 3,000 Yards.

A noiseless gun, using no gunpowder, calculated to fire 50,000 shots per minute and which has a range of 3,000 yards, has been invented by William Patten, twenty-seven years old, a resident of New York and a native of Liverpool, England.

Mr. Patten said to a New York American reporter the other day: "I thought of this gun five years ago. One day while at work a flywheel of a high speed steam engine burst, and the tensile strength was so great that it shattered the flywheel to atoms. This gave me the idea. I have worked on the gun eighteen months in this shop, and I applied for patents three months ago."

"The gun in operation will fire 20,000 shots per minute, and its extreme range is 3,000 yards, firing a round ball one-half inch in diameter. The ball will leave the muzzle at a speed of 1,750,000 feet a minute. There is no noise while the gun is in action, and no compressed air or electricity is used. It is simply based on centrifugal force."

"It can be mounted on an automobile or it can be made stationary, such as on the deck of a ship, and it can also be mounted on a universal carriage so as to swing in any arc."

"The gun very much resembles a coffee grinder, and the operator has simply to pour the shot into the hopper, and as fast as it can be put in it will be ejected. The ball will be of steel, and the gun will cost $800 to manufacture, less the power to drive it."

When asked what he was going to do with the invention Mr. Patten said:

"I am going to give the United States government the preference. It is not necessary to have a barrel, which might be conspicuous, and it is impossible to jam it. The gun will be six feet in diameter, two feet wide at the center and two inches on the outside diameter. The gun will be made of steel, and there are only ten parts. I can make this gun discharge 50,000 balls per minute. There are no valves connected with it whatever. Ninety-five horsepower will be sufficient to eject the balls 3,000 yards."

Mr. Patten has demonstrated with a six inch working model the ability of his gun to nearly penetrate a piece of tin at twenty-five yards with ordinary shot.

TATTOOING FOR BATHERS.

Fad Adopted by Beach Maidens at Atlantic City.

Jim Squid, ex-sailorman and expert handler of India ink "points," has been hiding from the frate fathers and brothers of a score of fair bathing maids since the latter proudly appeared on the beach at Atlantic City the other day with tattoo marks on their fair arms and shoulders.

Spectators perched in beach chairs gazed when they saw the first girl swing up the beach bearing on her rounded upper arm an intricate anchor and cable, and the surprise became a shock when it was discovered that other beach maidens had adopted the fad of having their arms marked with various devices.

At first glance it was supposed that the marks, which ranged from the anchor to hearts pierced with arrows, were merely painted on, but when it was discovered that the marks were needed in and practically indelible there was a general stampede among parents to discover the artist.

Several doting fathers began at once a search for Jim Squid.

It is said that the old sailorman has a small shop in the Bowery section of the board walk and that he has taken in several hundred dollars in carrying out his "art."

Tired of Revision by "Friends."

Senator Stephenson, Republican senator from Wisconsin and for sixty years a lumberman, is reported as saying in an interview that he decided twenty years ago the tariff on lumber should be lowered, but that "others did not appear to think so." The senator continues: "There is no question that the people want tariff revision. They have been told for several years that the tariff should be revised by its friends, and they are getting tired of it."

The senator is right. The people are tired of it. And, for fear that the senator's experience may be repeated and that "others" will not "appear to think so," when the senator again favors taking tariff graft from a trust the people will not intrust the revision of the tariff to its friends. They will prefer to trust those who tell which way they will revise it—up or down.

HOUSE OF MEMORIES

Indiana Man to Perpetuate Tender Associations of His Life.

HOOSIER WOOD FOR A HOOSIER

Two big piles of rough Indiana lumber are now attracting the attention of the residents of the famous Sheridan road of Chicago. The material is stacked up on a big lot in one of the finest and most exclusive residence sections of Chicago.

An Indiana man is building a house, and in the use of the lumber he has planned to perpetuate a number of the most tender associations of his life, all of which he brought from the great Hoosier domain.

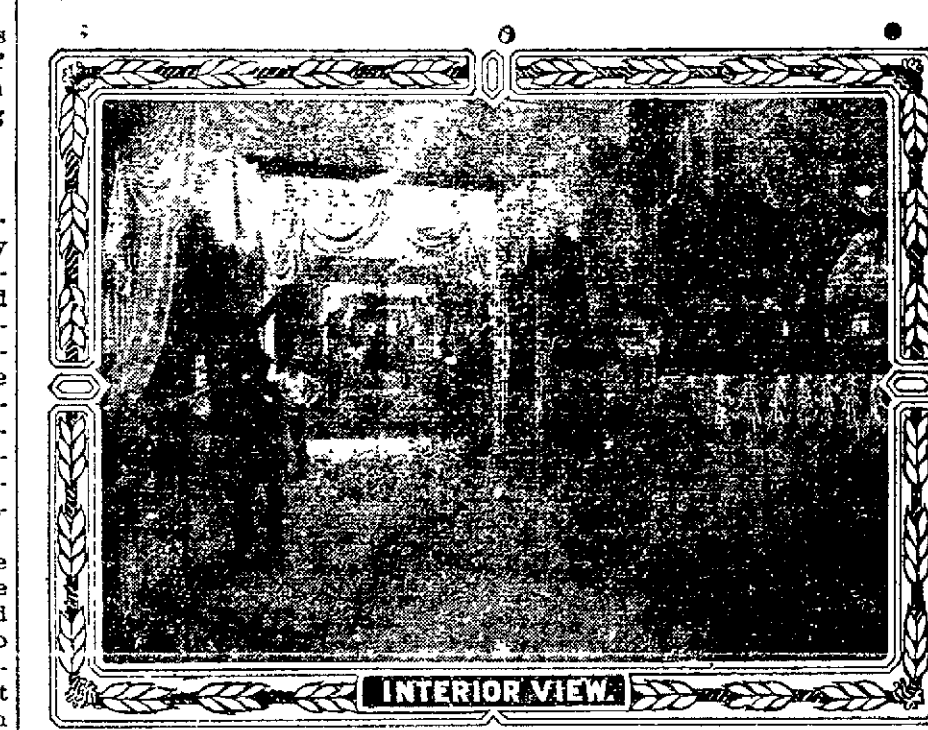

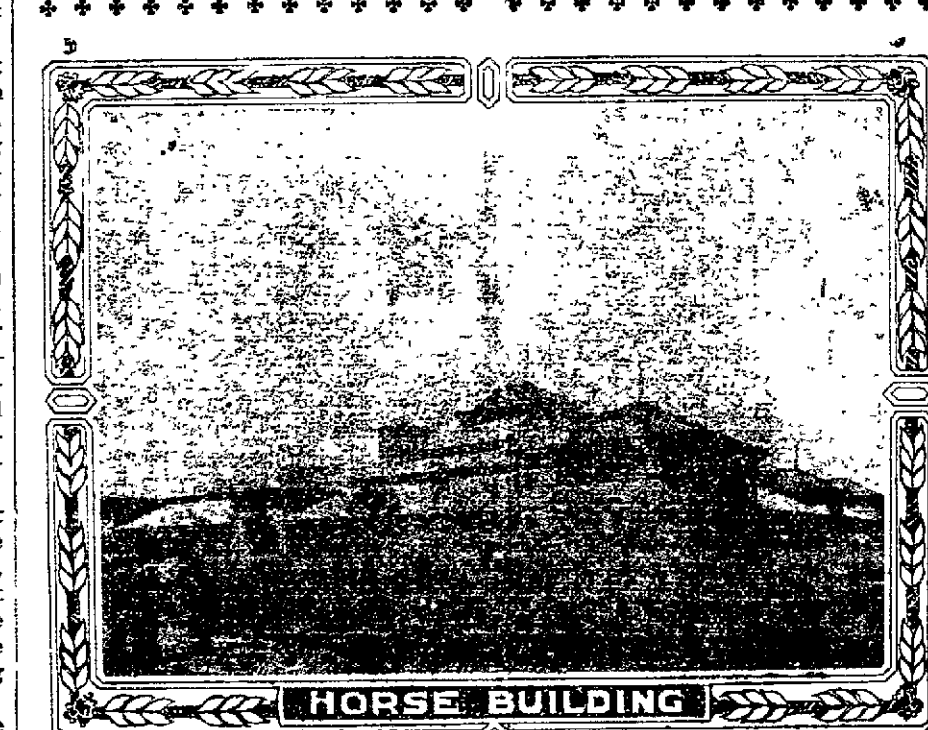

The builder is Dr. E. Hies Kerlin. The lumber is a fine grade and grain of black walnut, and it came from a farm four miles out of Richmond, says the Indianapolis News. It was cut on the farm of Dr. Kerlin's paternal grandfather and namesake, E. Hies Kerlin, who settled on the Indiana farm more than seventy years ago. On this farm Dr. Kerlin's father, James F. Kerlin, nursed the trees when they were mere saplings, and he kept them trimmed until they became monuments of the farmyard. It was from these trees that the lumber now piled up on the Sheridan roadside was sawed in an Indiana sawmill during the present year and is to form one of the most substantial residences on the north side.

After the death of Grandfather Kerlin the farm went to his daughter, now Mrs. John T. Alexander of Huntington, whom everybody in the community knew and knows as Aunt Mattie. When she was told that her nephew, Dr. Kerlin, was about to build a house she suggested that he finish at least one room from the lumber of the great walnut trees that still were standing on his grandfather's farm and which had been carefully nursed and kept trimmed by his own father. Dr. Kerlin acted on the suggestion at once. The trees were cut and hauled to a sawmill, and the product is now seen on the Sheridan park building lot in Chicago. The material will remain in the sun during the summer in process of drying. Then it will be kiln dried and ultimately dressed for the use in store for it. On the first floor of the new home will be a large living room. It will have a beamed ceiling, wainscoting, bookshelves built in the walls and a large mantel, all of which will be built from the Indiana black walnut shot.

Novel Plea in Murder Case.

* SCENES ON OHIO STATE FAIR GROUNDS *

OHIO'S Exposition, famed for the scenic beauty of its park ground, comprises one hundred and fifteen acres of rolling land, ideally located about two and one-half miles northeast of the State Capitol, and readily accessible by numerous electric railways from all points of Columbus. While the beautiful park ground, with its broad expanse of greenward dotted with exquisite designs of flowering embellishments, lagoons and shaded retreats, has brought fame to the Buckeye State, it is the seventeen colossal exhibition buildings erected thereon that have gained for Ohio the proud distinction of owning the finest and best equipped State Exposition in the Union.

We reproduce above a photographic view of the largest structure on the grounds—the Horse Exhibit Building. This structure is 322x332 feet, with stall accommodations for six hundred and fifty animals. Ohio's live stock show is conceded by all to be the grandest and most extensive in the middle west, and at the coming Exposition, to be held in Columbus, Aug. 31, Sept. 1, 2, 3, 4, next, more than six hundred head of the finest type of pure bred animals will be on exhibition in the Horse Building for your inspection and admiration.

They've Never Used The Right Kind

That's why some women don't like naphtha soaps.

The right kind is P. & G. Naphtha Soap.

It is as much better than other naphtha soaps as they are better than ordinary laundry soaps.

Why is it better? Because it is made of better materials; because its washing power is greater; because, being harder, it will last longer; because it weighs more and does more.

Millions of cakes of P. & G. Naphtha Soap are made every month. Every single cake helps to make some woman's work easier. By using it, she is able to do as much work in an hour as her neighbors do, in two. That is a fact—a fact to which hundreds of housewives bear willing testimony.

Good in Newark.

F. P. Kennedy, president of the Newark Trust company, was in Columbus yesterday calling on local bankers, says the Ohio State Journal. Mr. Kennedy said that he had been absent from Newark for some weeks and on his return was surprised to see the amount of activity in the little city. Newark this year will probably show the greatest proportionate amount of new building of any city in Ohio. A fine new arcade is going up.

ATTEMPT

At Suicide Made Friday Morning by Young Married Woman Who Was Despondent.

Mrs. Frank Armstrong, residing in the southwestern part of the city, attempted to commit suicide early Friday morning by swallowing an ounce of carbolic acid. The deed was caused by despondency, jealousy and homesickness, her parents living in another part of the state.

Dr. E. W. Rhinehart was called and after working with the woman for three hours succeeded in restoring her to consciousness. Friday noon she was resting as well as could be expected under the circumstances and stated that she would not repeat the attempt as one experience was enough for her.

Light on Cuban Affairs.

During a space of fifty years before the Spanish-American war put an end to Spanish rule in Cuba several American administrations were appealed to on the one hand and urged on the other to interfere in Cuba. Democratic and Republican presidents alike refused to mix in, and the history of Cuba was one of almost continual revolution on the part of the natives and of vigorous repression by the captain generals sent out from Madrid to keep order on the island. Finally Captain General Weyler was installed at Havana, and his alleged barbaric methods of treating rebels ended in a protest from this country, followed, after the blowing up of the United States battleship Maine in Havana harbor, with a declaration of war to put an end to Spanish cruelties.

Perhaps the naked truth about the sufferings of the Cubans at the hands of the Spanish soldiery has never reached this country. We have learned much through our own experience about the peculiar traits of the Cuban natives since we became involved in their affairs. Captain General Weyler's personal memoirs are soon to be published, and, as his preoccupation in Cuba, during which he earned the ignominious title of "Butcher Weyler," was one of the history making incidents of his military career, he will not be likely to gloss it over lightly in the pages of his book. Doubtless much falsehood about Weyler has gained currency in this country. Weyler has the reputation at home of a fearless soldier and an honest man. If he will tell the truth about his rule in Cuba it will be interesting and possibly instructive reading for the American public. No one supposes that Cuba's career has ceased to be eventful, and light upon the problem of keeping order there should be welcome, even at the hands of former Dictator Weyler.

Paraguay is likely to prove the tardiest of the Latin American republics in recognizing the possibility of changing the government personnel without a wholesale killing. Until the Paraguayans get a firm grip on the fact that the ballot is as effective an instrument as the bullet in bringing about changes they will continue to have revolutions and a paralyzed industry as a result of the uprisings.

RUSHING CITY WORK

Several car loads of iron pipe for the new water works extension arrived in the city Thursday and work will be commenced at once to unload the pipe and distribute it.

The American Light and Water company is preparing things for the final official test of its part of the water works system. The fire hydrants are being gone over and placed in good condition. Many of them were put in the ground in a rusty condition making it necessary to take the valves out of the plugs and clean off the rust.

Things are being gotten in readiness at Fourth street and the work of laying the paving blocks will commence probably this afternoon.

REAL NECESSITIES TAXED.

Duties Are Much Heavier Upon Articles That People of Small or Moderate Means Are Compelled to Buy Than Upon Those in Which the Wealthy Alone Are Interested.

It is universally conceded that a tax ought not to fall more heavily upon those of small or moderate wealth than it does upon the well to do and wealthy. It is often considered right that a tax should be graduated so as to bear proportionately more heavily upon those having greater wealth. In imposing an income tax small incomes are usually exempted, and the rate of taxation is often made to increase with the size of the income.

It is also generally recognized that a tax upon an article of general use, even if the tax be levied at a uniform percentage, imposes an unjust burden upon those having small or moderate incomes, for the poor man will spend a much larger share of his income for the article taxed than will the millionaire. Workmen undoubtedly spend a much larger fraction of their income for articles like sugar or salt and therefore pay, in proportion to their wealth or incomes, a much larger share of the tariff duties on these articles than is paid by men of large wealth. Indeed, there is little doubt that many a workingman with a large family pays, absolutely as well as in proportion to income, more of the tax on certain necessities of life than is paid by the millionaire because he and his family consume more.

The tax on articles of ordinary consumption would thus be condemned as unjust if the poor paid at the same rate per cent as the rich. But the tariff taxes are outrageously unfair for the further reason that almost without exception they impose a heavier rate of tax upon articles consumed by the poor than upon those used by the wealthy. This could not be so if all rates were ad valorem, a certain percentage of the value of the article taxed, and the same rates were applied to the cheaper articles bought by the poor and to the costlier articles bought by the rich. But the Dingley tariff contains a multitude of specific duties, so much per pound or per yard, and the effect of these duties is to tax the article of poor or moderate quality just as much as the finest and most expensive articles.

For example, the man who buys an unlined glove of sheep leather, "glace" finish, is taxed by the Dingley tariff at the rate of $3 per dozen, and the man who buys a lined fancy stitched or embroidered glove of the same material pays duty at the rate of $4.40 per dozen. But during the year ending June 30, 1907, those who purchased the former and cheaper grade were taxed 68.28 per cent of the value of the glove, while those who purchased the latter and more expensive glove were taxed only 14.19 per cent. The latter glove was worth $31 per dozen, the former $43.

In ladies' or children's gloves the discrimination was great. Gloves of the material already mentioned over seventeen inches in length, worth only $4.20 per dozen, were taxed $3.15 per dozen, equal to 74.98 per cent of their value, while gloves of a finer quality, worth $19.98 per dozen, were taxed $4.15 per dozen, equal to only 20.78 per cent of their value. Thus it was that the poor man buying gloves of this sort paid on his own gloves a tax nearly five times as heavy and on the gloves of his wife and children a tax nearly four times as heavy as the tax paid by his wealthy neighbor.

The man who used iron or steel trousers buckles, worth 8 cents per hundred, was taxed at the rate of 77.48 per cent of their value, while the man who could afford a better quality, worth $1.28 per hundred, was taxed at the rate of only 26.68 per cent. The man who bought spectacles or eyeglasses worth 24.4 cents a dozen paid a tax of 96.81 per cent of their value, but the man buying a quality worth $9.97 per dozen paid only 50 per cent. The purchaser of a certain class of watch movements worth only 55.3 cents apiece was taxed 69.02 per cent. The purchaser of a quality of watch movements worth $30.14 apiece was taxed 34.95 per cent. Agate buttons worth one-tenth of a cent per line endured a tax of 70.73 per cent. Metal buttons worth 5 cents per line bore a tax of 50.03 per cent.

Fur hats and bonnets of all descriptions averaging in value $2.60 per dozen were taxed 96.66 per cent; those of a quality worth $25.49 per dozen were taxed 47.46 per cent. Partly manufactured wool and hair worth 33 1/3 cents per pound was taxed 149 per cent; that worth $1.14 per pound was taxed 63.70 per cent. Wool blankets worth 28.6 cents per pound paid a duty of 165.42 per cent, blankets worth $1.05 per pound a duty of 71.30 per cent. Plushes and other similar fabrics worth 35.9 cents per pound sustained a tax of 141.74 per cent, while worth $1.09 per pound a tax of 95.33 per cent.

It will be seen that when rich and poor were laying in a stock of clothing Uncle Sam was guilty of discrimination of much the same character as the discrimination he has so roundly and justly condemned in the railroads between small and large shippers. The Dingley duty is like the secret rebate in more ways than one.

It strikes down its victims so insidiously and secretly that they do not know what has wounded them. They blame themselves, Providence, luck—anything but the right cause. The voter of moderate means who has been voting for tariff taxes would do so no longer if when he went to buy the winter's clothing for his family he could know the actual truth that the millionaire and his wife, trading on the other side of the store, pay through the storekeeper to Uncle Sam or to the trusts a tax of only 14.32 per cent on woolen or worsted cloth worth $1.12 per pound, while he pays 134.97 per cent on similar cloth worth 38.8 cents per pound; if he knew that his rich friends pay for their knit fabrics, worth $1.07 per pound, a tax of only 55.67 per cent, while he pays 141 per cent on knit fabrics worth 36.4 cents per pound; if he knew that they pay on their winter flannel underwear worth more than 70 cents per pound a tax of only 86.39 per cent, while he pays 143.67 per cent on the flannels which he buys worth 19.4 cents per pound.

If the objection is made that not every man buys these imported articles, the reply is not difficult. These articles of widely different qualities were actually imported and sold, some of them in very large quantities. They bore these highly discriminating duties, and their respective American purchasers were treated most unequally and partially, the consumer of the cheaper articles paying at enormously greater rates than the consumers of the finer qualities. In an open market it is conceivable that there was not something like the same discrimination in prices between the consumers of cheap and the consumers of costly domestic products? In these days much the smaller share of our tariff taxes goes to the government. The bulk of them goes to the trusts, which sell at prices they are enabled to maintain because of the exclusion of foreign competition. Men of moderate means, workmen, poor men of all classes, have been told that the tariff exists for their special benefit and protection. If this claim were true, would the makers of the tariff have so arranged the rates of duty that articles used by the wealthy bear by far the lightest burden of taxation?

THE PLANET JUPITER.

What the Man of Science Has to Say About Its Wonders.

The Jovian Jovians are said to be realities and not myths. Not only are there said to be inhabitants on Jupiter, but also on some of his moons, in the midst of which the vast planet, 1,300 times the size of the earth, spins at such tremendous speed that it causes around the equator a furious wind that blows perpetually at the rate of 250 miles an hour. Those who believe in the Jovian say that his height runs from fifty to fifty-five feet and that he exists for about 800 to 1,000 of earth years. The Jupiter year, however, consists of 14 months. The oceans of Jupiter, torn into fury by the hurricanes, would pay no attention to one moon such as moves the tides of our earth, and it takes no fewer than five of these satellites to perform this work for Jupiter. They travel at various rates of speed, some flying close to Jupiter's surface, others far off. They have atmospheres like ours on earth, and a moonlight on Jupiter is indeed a glorious sight, for these moons have a variety of color; two are blue, one is yellow, and one red. Jupiter needs all her moons at night for illumination, for without them her five hours of darkness would be black indeed. So distant is the sun that broad daylight is hardly brighter than twilight on earth, and one lone moon would not reflect enough of the sun's rays to guide the Jovian footsteps.

FREE RAW MATERIALS.

Absurd to Tax Them in a Manufacturing Country—Duty on Cattle.

It is said that the Canadian summer is too short for the thorough fattening of cattle, and therefore many head of Canadian cattle are brought into the United States, fed through the summer and shipped abroad. There is, however, a duty of nearly 30 per cent to be paid when they are imported. Without this duty many more cattle would be brought in and much more profitable use would be made of our pastures, corn and hay. English consumers are threatening to remove existing legal restrictions and import these cattle and feed them on English farms, and this may be the result. Speaking of this situation, the New York Journal of Commerce recently said:

"Duties on raw materials are an absurdity in a manufacturing country, and the rule has a wide application. What would become of the great manufacturing industries of England if she were to put a tax upon the importation of cotton, wool, hides and skins, furs and other materials? We are trying to build up industries in which these are used, and yet we impose duties upon most of them, except cotton, of which we raise a surplus for export, and silk, which we do not raise at all. We make leather goods for export in spite of the duty on hides, but the duty on wool prevents the manufacturing industry from growing so as to supply our own wants. There is no sense in a duty on live cattle for a country that can produce them as cheaply as any other and that makes a business of exporting meat. It is equally absurd to put a duty on wheat when we export both the grain and the flour made from it. There are economy and gain for both capital and labor in turning materials into manufactured products, whether for domestic or foreign markets, instead of exporting them in the raw state or making it costly to import them for our own use."

A Counterfeit Wedding Trip.

[Original.]

Olivia Kittridge had never traveled alone, but it was necessary that she go to New York at once to join her mother, who was ill there. It was but one night's journey on the boat, and since a stateroom had been provided her father felt assured that she would make the trip without annoyance.

During the early evening she sat out on the guard enjoying the view of water and land. Others were near her, among them a nun, a young sister whose face made an impression upon Olivia. The nun carried a prayer book, but did not look into it, nor did she tell the beads on the rosary that hung to her waist. Nevertheless, whether it was an appearance of holiness induced by her dress or the life led by a member of a sisterhood, Olivia could not keep her eyes off her. Perhaps the nun noticed the interest she had awakened, for she drew her chair nearer and spoke a few words in a musical contralto voice. This led to a conversation, in which the sister lamented that she must sleep in a chair during the night, every bed on the boat being taken.

Olivia had been cautioned by her father to have nothing to do with strangers. Nevertheless she did not even think of this caution in connection with this holy young girl. There were two berths in her stateroom, and would it not be a contrast with the devotion of the sister, whose life was entirely unselfish, for Olivia to sleep comfortably alone while she might make the nun so by permitting her to occupy one of those berths? Without any forethought whatever she gave the invitation.

With many heartfelt thanks the nun availed herself of the offer. Indeed, a great load seemed to be lifted from her mind. When Olivia retired the sister told her that she would not crowd her by going to bed at the same time, but would wait till her benefactor had got into her berth. Olivia went into the stateroom, and after she had lain down the nun came in and instead of divesting herself of her clothing climbed to the upper berth as she was.

In the morning just after dawn Olivia was awakened by the boat being warped into the dock. Standing before the mirror was a young man. He was handsome, well dressed and refined looking, but on his face was anxiety. Olivia was so frightened that she was about to close her eyes and feign sleep when the young man saw her reflection in the mirror. He turned to her and said:

"Don't fear me! For heavens' sake don't cry out! I am hunted and have availed myself of your kind offer for concealment. I hoped to go out without your knowing how I have deceived you. I am no thief. Indeed, I am not that for which they wish to take me."

He had scarcely spoken the last word when there came a loud rap at the door. With it vanished the last bit of color in the man's face. Then a sudden thought seemed to come to him. Bending down to Olivia's ear, he whispered:

"You may save me. I shall tell them that they have made a mistake; that we are a bride and groom on our wedding trip. I implore you not to betray me." Then, suddenly summoning his resolution, he opened the door partly and said, assuming that he supposed the knock to be to awaken passengers, "All awake here."

"Is there a nun in this room?"
"No; a bridal couple on our wedding trip."

"We must satisfy ourselves."
The young man looked appealingly at Olivia. It was a terrible struggle between her womanly sympathy and all a woman holds sacred. The former triumphed.

"There is no one here," she said, "except my husband and myself."

The young man shut the door, and there was no more knocking or calling. The young man as soon as he recovered his equanimity said, "The day may come when I can repay you for this," then stepped out through the window and was gone.

Meanwhile Olivia, whose heart was beating like a kettledrum, arose, dressed herself and went into the cabin, where she found one who was to meet her coming toward her. Then, trembling, she left the boat.

Five years passed. One evening at a ball Olivia on the arm of a friend passed a man sauntering with a lady companion. She knew at a glance that he was the man who had posed as a nun, and he knew she was the woman who had saved him.

A few minutes later he approached her. She was eager for an explanation, and it came.

He was heir to a large estate. When a minor he had been attacked by a disease that had produced a temporary nervous condition and had been confined in a retreat. An uncle, his guardian, had sought to keep him there till he could cover a misappropriation of his ward's funds. The young man recovered, made his escape in a nun's clothing and placed himself in the hands of his lawyers, who protected him from being returned to the asylum and eventually gained for him control of his property.

"And now," he said in conclusion, "I have been hunting for you for years. But for you I might have died in the asylum or been kept there till my uncle had absorbed my property. My life is yours to dispose of."

She disposed of it by marrying him. The wedding trip did not take place on a steamer. Neither the bride nor groom could endure to think of that enforced mockery of a bridal.

HEALTH OFFICER

MAKES MORTALITY REPORT FOR MONTH OF JULY TO HEALTH BOARD.

Dr. W. H. Knauss, the city health officer, has submitted his mortality report to the Board of Health for the month of July, showing that there were but 23 deaths within the city in July. There is also a wonderful scarcity of the usual summer ailments such as typhoid fever, there being but one case of this disease reported during the month.

Of the 23 deaths, 11 were children under two years showing that the infantile summer complaints are claiming as many victims in proportion to the deaths, as in other cities. In Columbus for the same month, 44 babies died of summer complaints.

Twelve males and 11 females were numbered among the dead last month and twelve were buried at Cedar Hill, five at Calvary and six were taken to other cemeteries.

There were seven married persons and 14 single and two widows in the death list and nine were natives of the city where they died, and 13 from other points in the United States.

The third and fourth wards lead in the number of deaths, the fourth ward having nine, third ward eight, first ward two, and second ward four. One death occurred in the City Hospital and none in the sanitarium.

The births exceeded the deaths in the city by 19, there being 24 bouncing baby boys and 18 bright little girls born during the month. The births by wards follow: First ward 7, second ward 5, third ward 15, fourth ward 15. In the number of births, the third and fourth wards lead again.

Dr. Knauss reported that he had collected $4.90 divided as follows: Milk permits, $3; vault permits, $1.40; meat permits, 50 cents. He issued three permits for the sale of milk, one meat permit and 14 vault permits. The health officer and inspector made 28 milk and dairy inspections, 197 meat and food inspections and looked up and abated 163 nuisances. Contagious diseases reported included measles 3, typhoid 1, scarlet fever 1. The health officer made one fumigation. The police service of the health department made 15 visits during the month.

Old Engineer Dead.

Theodore Mitchell, the oldest engineer on the B. & O. railroad, it not in the world, in point of length of service, died at his home in St. Clairsville on Thursday night, aged 76 years. He was actively engaged at his duties until two weeks ago, when he was taken sick. He had worked for the B. & O. railroad company since 1853, when he commenced his service as a fireman. For many years he ran an engine through Newark, and was well known by many of our citizens. Some years ago he was transferred to the St. Clairsville division, which is a part of the Newark division.

Pump House Burned.

The pump house on the B. & O. railroad at Canal Dover burned shortly after 10 o'clock Wednesday night. It was a frame structure and stood opposite the yard office. The fire was not discovered until it was well under way, and the building was burned to the ground. The coal dock which adjoins the pump house caught fire but water from nearby engines extinguished it. The engine and boiler in the pump house were damaged and it is thought that the loss will be several hundred dollars.

Mr. George Taylor, his father, and grand father have occupied the same farm for one hundred and one years.

A LAFAYETTE WOMAN HUNG

MARVELOUS RESULTS OF THE GREAT DISCOVERY.

When the Root Juice scientist was at Lafayette, Ind., Mrs. Tom Sheldon of that city, called on him, and said: "I actually hung to the neck of my husband and pleaded with him to try Root Juice. So much was being said about the many cures the remedy was making, that I felt it might do him some good. He had suffered for years with his stomach and kidneys, and severe headache. Every change of the weather his back hurt him intensely, and of late years the lightest food would ferment in his stomach and bowels, and the formation of gas would cause him to bloat very much. He had tried so many things that he had lost heart, but I finally persuaded him to get a bottle of Root Juice. The first bottle made him feel so much better that he went back to the drug store and got three more bottles. After using four bottles of the truly wonderful medicine his health seems perfect. I never saw such a change in a man in my life. He told me that he would not take a fortune for what Root Juice has done for him. The remedy creates much excitement in every city in which it is introduced. One of the demonstrators was at Piqua recently and nearly every day the newspapers at that point reported marvelous good that was being derived from the use of the remedy by numerous citizens. The instructors are now at the City Drug Store and will remain a few days. IS MANUAL TRAINING IN SCHOOLS WORTH WHILE

According to Mr. George Frederic Stratton, in Cassier's Magazine for June, the father, the taxpayer, and the employer of labor are asking, "What is it all for,—this 'manual training,' with its expensive equipment, its special teachers, and its demands upon the boy's time?" and the question is growing insistent. The school authorities do not regard manual training as a preparation for an industrial career.

It is an absolute necessity for the workman of today to be able to understand the detailed drawings of the work on which he may be engaged,—be it a locomotive, a railroad trestle, or a factory building. The only way in which he can acquire such understanding is through a course of strictly mechanical drawing; yet in a large majority of the schools in which manual training is taught the pupils are allowed to devote time which ought properly to be given to mechanical drawing to fiddling, ornamental work.

It is undoubtedly the fact that "a great many instructors regard manual training in itself as a golden opportunity for the dissemination of a larger understanding and appreciation of art." This probably explains the rule, in force in most schools where manual training has been introduced into the eighth and ninth grades, which requires every pupil to give some time to the subject, even though he may be intended for a carpenter, a physician, or a lawyer.

Light is thrown on the status of manual training in the high schools by a report of Prof. F. W. Ballou of the University of Cincinnati. He found that of 267 high schools, 159 permitted students to elect the course, while forty-eight made it compulsory. Further, that forty-eight gave two hours a week to such work; 166 one hour; and some as little as twenty-five minutes (1).

There is at the present time an increasing demand for bright, well-trained young mechanics, which cannot be supplied.

The railroad manager needs more trackage, more rolling stock, and larger yard facilities, and cannot secure them. * * * The men to build the locomotives and cars and to meet the rapidly increasing demands of all manufacturers are still in embryo. One of the largest contractors in New England, in a recent speech, said: "It is, in my opinion, useless to look for any relief from the manual-training systems in the public schools as at present conducted."

In so little estimation is the public school manual training course held by manufacturers that the manager of a large plant, where there are more than 200 apprentices, being asked if any time was credited to high school pupils on his apprentice course, replied emphatically:

"Not a day! How much could we allow them, in justice to the others? The total time they put in on a two years' course in the school is not over 160 hours,—just about equal to three weeks of our time; and it is doubtful to me if they have learned as much in that long drawn-out stretch of tuition as they would learn in three straight weeks in our shops."

In many of the cities the problem has been taken up by the boards of trade, and the business men have been called upon to make suggestions; but "so far, all is chaos." It is, moreover, proved by statistics that the high schools do not furnish material for mechanics to a degree that makes manual training there worth while. It was found that of 2,500 graduates who had been obliged to take manual training only 6 per cent had taken up mechanical work.

The proposal has been made that appropriations should be made for post-graduate courses in manual training for grammar school graduates. To this there is a serious obstacle. Such thorough training cannot be given without the continual use of material; and unless a market can be found for the products, which is very doubtful, the expense of such material, added to the expense of furnishing tools and equipment and competent instructors, would be greater than municipalities would care to incur. It would undoubtedly arouse the antagonism of the tax payers.

There are, however, two existing methods of industrial and technical education which have such excellent records of success that they seem to indicate a solution of the questions, "Who to train?" and "How to train?" These are the courses of the Young Men's Christian Association and the correspondence school systems.

A study of the personnel of the young men who comprise the Young Men's Christian Association and the correspondence school classes shows that they are, almost without exception, young workers already in their several trades. They have gone direct from the grammar schools, and sometimes from the high schools, into industrial occupations, and the desire to become better men has drawn them into the classes mentioned. Here, then, is the true material, and the finest of material. Young, bright, enthusiastic men * * * devoting two or three evenings each week to real endeavor at self improvement. Such boys and men are worth while.

The superintendent of a great machine shop says:

The best men I have are the few who have taken those evening or correspondence courses while working in here daily. * * * They have character too! A man indifferent to his future and to his work won't study nights. These night students make good men and true,—every time!

MEETING

Of Missionary Societies Held at Granville—Short Session of the City Council.

Granville, Aug. 7.—A well attended meeting of the missionary societies of this place was held Friday afternoon, at 3 o'clock in Cleveland Hall, when the following program was carried out:

Devotional service.
Music.
Baptist, Chapin Car and Colporters, Miss Mary Wilson.
Episcopal, Institutional Work, Mrs. Winifred Smith.
Methodist, The Deaconess, Mrs. W. H. Miller.
Presbyterian, The Response of the Laymen to the Call of Missions, Mrs. W. J. Pond.
Vesper Service.
Social Hour.

At the last meeting of the village council a petition was presented to the council, which was signed by a large number of citizens, asking that the approaches to Sugar Loaf from Broadway to West Maple street, be fixed so that the small vehicles and pedestrians may have easy access to Sugar Loaf park. John Powell was elected to fill the unexpired term of Prof. C. W. Chamberlain, resigned, and the street committee was authorized to purchase a road scraper.

Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Kier and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Robinson have returned home after a two weeks' trip in Michigan. Mr. and Mrs. B. I. Jones who went with them, decided to remain longer. Mrs. John DeBow, one of the best known and most highly respected Christian women of this place, was stricken with apoplexy at her home Wednesday evening, and since that time has been in a most critical condition.

Mrs. Ellen Mayoner of Piqua, Ohio who has been here for several days, visiting friends, has returned home. Several of our citizens have signified their intention of taking in the Mackinac excursion on the 17th.

Postmaster and Mrs. L. A. Austin have gone to Providence, R. I., where they will visit for a time. Before returning home they will also visit in Deposit, N. Y.

Sharon Valley Social.

The social given by the Sharon Valley Sunday school on the lawn of the Sharon Valley school house Thursday night, was a most gratifying success. There was a large attendance and everybody had a most enjoyable time. Mr. J. T. Abbott, who has two Sunday school classes, one at the Elizabeth Chapel in Newark, and one at the Sharon Valley, gave the members of his classes a fine treat. By arrangement the members of both classes met at the Elizabeth Chapel and were conveyed from that place to the Sharon Valley by Mr. Abbott, in a large hay wagon. As the wagon neared the home of Mrs. King the young ladies, twenty in number, sang "My Country 'Tis of Thee," and the "Star Spangled Banner," the singers waving small flags which they had provided themselves with. People from all the surrounding country were in attendance and the affair was a glorious success in every particular.

Y. M. C. A.

Takes Down Sign and Gives Up Use of the Eleventh Street Athletic Grounds.

The Newark Y. M. C. A. has for some years, used the open grounds on Eleventh street for athletic purposes by permission of the owners, but the use of these grounds has never been confined to Y. M. C. A. members or controlled by the association management.

Recently it has become common practice to use the grounds for Sunday baseball, and the association folks have taken down the sign and given up all connection with the place because it is impossible to control its use.

The physical department hopes some day to see an athletic park in Newark properly fenced, where healthful out door sports may be promoted without the moral dangers of the open commons.

A keen sympathy with the Latin desire of young men and boys for the recreative games and sports does not lead the association to foster the value of clean morals.

Children's wash suits, half price at Hermann's sale.

CORONER CONDEMS TOBOGGAN SLIDE

Zanesville, Aug. 7.—In his report on the death of Leo West, the Crooksville man, who lost his life as a result of a fall from the toboggan at Buckeye Lake, Coroner C. H. Higgins of Muskingum county condemns that attraction as being unsafe and a menace to human life. The coroner states that death was due to fracture of the skull and that the slide from which West fell, was not sufficiently protected.
